

Construction Contractors Board Mandatory Training and Test Requirement Information

Completing the required training and passing the state test must be done before you can get licensed. The training covers business practices and laws that relate to construction contractors. These are not trade related classes. The purpose of the training is to (1) help you understand laws and business practices for a contracting business in Oregon and (2) help you pass the test.

Below are CCB-approved providers that currently offer the 16-hour training. Call several providers to find the class that is right for you. The trainings differ in services, format, and price (Check to see if a copy of the course manual, the Oregon Contractor's Reference Manual, ninth edition is included in the training price). Providers must make instructors available to answer your questions at least one hour a week for three months after you purchase the training. Most offer much more assistance. Be sure to ask the providers what kind of services and materials are included in the training fee, how long the services are good for, and what percentage of their students have passed the test.
