Commercial Contractors: New Continuing Education for July 2010

NEW CONTINUING EDUCATION REQUIRED FOR YOUR NEXT RENEWAL

Beginning July 1, 2010, all commercially endorsed contractors must certify on their renewal that they have completed continuing education (CE).

- WHO: All CCB commercially endorsed contractors that renew a commercial CCB license. Training can be taken by any "key" employee of the business.
- WHAT: Commercial Contractor CE is now part of the requirements for continued licensing with the CCB.
- WHEN: Certification that a contractor has completed the required amount of CE hours begins with renewals on or after July 1, 2010.
- HOW: Determine how much CE, who can take it for your business and what training qualifies. (See reverse side for more information.)

How do I provide the CE information to the CCB?

You will be asked to declare that you have taken the training on your next CCB license renewal. You should keep records of all continuing education taken by your "key" employees.

CCB will not ask you to provide proof of continuing education at the time of renewal, except for your written, promised (declaration) that you completed the continuing education required for your business.
